

Dear Earth,

I'm sorry for all the damage that has been done to you. I don't understand why people would want to cut down the Amazon Rainforest. We should be protecting the special creatures and plants that live there. We need to stop putting plastic in the rivers and seas because it is killing all the animals that live in them. We need to stop putting pollution into the sky because it is causing you to get hotter and then start to melt.

We need to stop pollution by using solar panels and wind turbines to make our electricity. I promise I will turn the lights off when no-one is using them.

We need to stop cutting down the rainforests to keep the animals and plants alive. I will use things that come from sustainable forests (that means we grow new trees for the ones we cut down).

When we go to the beach we can take no plastic but take our food in lunchboxes and keep the litter in them or put them in the bin. If I see loads of plastic on the beach I will pick it up and put it in the bin where it is supposed to be and that will stop sea creatures from dying.

If we all look after you, you will stay nice and safe, clean and happy. I promise to do my best to keep you alive.

From Jack L (age 8).
